TechCentrics Launches Cybersecurity Strategy & Operations Practice
Former White House CISO Joe Schatz Joins TechCentrics as Managing Principal of Cybersecurity Strategy & Operations Practice

Arlington, VA – TechCentrics, Inc., a technology consulting firm based in Alexandria VA announced that it is launching a highly specialized Cybersecurity Strategy and Operations practice. Joe Schatz, former White House Chief Information Security Officer, will join TechCentrics, Inc. as partner and Managing Principal of Cyber Security Strategies and Operations. In this newly created service offering, he will oversee the strategy and operations for clients' cyber security and threat intelligence.

"From day one of the Trump administration, Joe led the daunting task of keeping the White House networks and staff safe from the onslaught of cyber attacks," said Chris Herndon, the firm's founder.

Joe Schatz brings over 17 years of federal cybersecurity expertise to TechCentrics including his experience from the White House, US Senate, National Cyber Investigative Joint Task Force, Department of the Treasury, and US Air Force. At the White House, he developed the cybersecurity best-practices that led to the formation of joint agency threat intelligence team, data loss prevention team and the travel awareness program.

"I am quite excited about the new opportunity to join Chris and team at TechCentrics to assist clients in strengthening their cyber programs" Schatz said.

Chris Herndon founded TechCentrics, Inc. in 2016. Herndon served as Deputy Assistant to President Trump and Director of White House Information Technology. Prior to his position at the White House, Chris held C-Level and senior IT leadership positions with some of Washington DC area's most respected government systems integrators including MorganFranklin, SRA International and CSRA.
